

Ina Stašević

1. What is your general opinion about today's world media? The media has a great influence on the formation of opinions. They are directed more towards sensationalism than towards the problems of society. Often, they do not give a complete picture and different possibilities for solving the problem. It is positive that they expose anomalies in society. Information is released to the public without a clear editorial policy. A lot of information that poisons society should not be given space in the public media. On the other hand, a lot of irrelevant information hides important ones.

2. How would you like it to transform in the future? Texts in the media should be based on objective indicators and real facts. Reduce sensationalism and dedicate more space to analysis and positive solutions.

3. How do you plan to contribute to its transformation? I see my role in journalism in the correct presentation. In conversations, I always encourage positive examples and discover new opportunities for cooperation between Croatia and other countries. I have great respect for the culture from which the interlocutor comes.

Mona Ben gamra

In my opinion, media propaganda has always been a problem today. It influences public opinion, distorts reality, and serves the interests of certain power groups. Media propaganda can take different forms, such as the manipulation of images, the selection of sources, the repetition of messages, or the censorship of dissenting voices. It aims to create an artificial consensus, to arouse emotions, or to divert attention from the real issues. Media propaganda is dangerous for democracy because it prevents critical debate, pluralism of ideas, and citizen participation. It is therefore essential to develop critical thinking, diversify your sources of information, and be wary of simplistic or dogmatic discourse.

In my work as a journalist, I have always tried to respect the principles of ethics and professional conduct that underpin my profession. I also did my best to give voice to the voiceless and to the people that false intellectuals and media propaganda have banned from public debate. I think it is the role of an independent and critical journalist to denounce the lies, manipulations and injustices that plague our society. This is why I invite you to read my articles, my investigations and my reports, which will help you discover a reality other than that presented to you by the dominant media.

For a long time, I have strived to highlight the issues and manipulations hidden behind certain media discourses in my country. Through my press articles, I have exposed the interests and agendas that guide the dissemination of certain information, particularly on sensitive issues. I have written dozens of articles to analyze and criticize media propaganda strategies and to call for freer and more responsible information. I strongly invite you to consult the archives of the newspapers Le Temps and Le Quotidien and you will be surprised by the hundreds of articles that I have written during my 22-year career to denounce lies and bring justice to those who need it. <https://www.turess.com/fr/letemps/119447>

<https://www.turess.com/fr/letemps/119061> <https://www.turess.com/fr/letemps/119046>

I think the first thing to do is to continue producing articles that expose the manipulators of public opinion. To do this, we must give ourselves the means to achieve our ambitions and invest in media that offer an alternative vision of the facts. We must also count on honest journalists, effective communicators and media experts to restore the balance of information and present another aspect of reality.

Ramarokoto Soa Maharitra

1- The media play an important role in society. Even if the main mission of the media is to share well-founded and cross-checked information, they educate at the same time. The media shape society.

Over the years, media evolve with the advancement of new technologies. The media still has its place despite the preponderance of social networks. Journalists then face time problems because social networks are much simpler and much faster for sharing facts even though these facts are not necessarily well-founded. In certain countries like ours, access to information still remains a problem for many rural people. 2- In the future, the media should give an important place to digitalization. Journalist must be well trained and have more open minds. 3- As a journalist, I have a duty to provide reliable information. I believe that every press box should have modern equipment.