

Nargiza Umarova

1. The global media space today is developing dynamically, acquiring various forms and contents. Modern media are trying to interact more with the audience, use non-traditional methods of transmitting information and organizing feedback from consumers of their content. For example, social networks have already become part of traditional media, and in some cases even completely replaced them. At the same time, such a new technological phenomenon as artificial intelligence is penetrating the mass media, which, on the one hand, facilitates the process of creating and transmitting a massive stream of data, and on the other, challenges journalism. The world's media is also seriously hampered by disinformation. The fight against fakes has become almost the main problem of professional journalism of this century, the solution of which requires enormous efforts and expense.

2. I think that in the future the trend towards digitalization of media and visualization of content will intensify. The evolution of social media will continue, as will the advance of artificial intelligence in the information environment. However, with any external transformations, the main thing is to maintain professionalism in the journalistic environment.

3. According to my observations, with the development of Internet journalism, which is characterized by efficiency and capacious presentation of information, analytical journalism is gradually losing its position. This is more typical for developing countries, whose population has not yet become oversaturated with low-quality content. My current activity is focused on political analytics. The development of this area is extremely important for Uzbekistan, which is pursuing an active domestic and foreign policy.

Efaf alsharif

1) The international media today are not all characterized by credibility, as they serve those who hate the elevation of the Islamic religion, and therefore the international media today falsify the facts and distort everyone who defends the religion and its components. Rather, it is a media harnessed to polish the Zionist entity, the Americans, in the first place, and glorify them to prove to the whole world that these countries call for freedom and democracy. It is a symbol of freedom, despite the fact that its slogans are false, and in reality, it is considered an extremist, racist dictatorial regime that reflects facts in a different way than it appears. However, there is a resistance media that exposes their falsehood, proving this with irrefutable facts with clear evidence and evidence by photographing the real scenes without resorting to falsehood and deceit. The truth of the media in general is considered a double-edged sword. There are those who use it to change the facts, and there are those who use it to expose falsehoods and clarify the distorted picture in its correct form.

2) I want the media in the future to transform into spreading the truth, supporting religion, and defending the sacred. The media in the world must speak the truth and expose the falsehood of the enemy. The media must become a piercing bullet that strikes the enemy's chest and skull. I want the Independent to become a tongue that speaks justice, a transparent media that defends religion and the sacred and publishes Truth, goodness, and peace, not hatred and rivalry. I want it to be polite media that revives the authentic values and principles that do not deviate from the Qur'anic culture and that introduces the world to the culture of jihad and martyrdom, shows the impact of that on society, develops the servant's relationship with his Lord, and instills in the souls the love of the Qur'an and the love of the Messenger of God, his honorable family, and the righteous saints. Of His servants whom God chose and subjected to be the guides from error. 3) As a journalist and writer, I plan to publish what raises the importance of my religious beliefs and sacred things through awareness and guidance in all possible ways and means. I contribute what I can with all the energy God has given me. As a researcher and writer, I will not stop delivering the facts to everyone who does not know them in an attractive and convincing manner, that is, no one like me. In my illogical and unconvincing style. Praise be to God, God has inspired me and helped me and I have published two books and I am on my way to completing the third. Had it not been for the circumstances that Yemen is going through and the lack of financial support, I would have done a lot of documentary and written work that serves the Islamic religion.